Annex 2

Summary of observations in audit book comments relating to the annual report

1. The provision

The following is a more detailed account of the contents of the provision, including an interpretation of the most important expressions in the provision.

1.1 The wording of the provision

The requirement for a summary of all observations appears in section 4(2), 2nd and 3rd clauses, as well as section 17(3), 2nd and 3rd clauses of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups:

In a separate section of the audit book comments relating to the annual report, the auditors (the external auditors and the internal auditors respectively) shall provide a summary of all observations which following the audit must be made to the board of directors. The summary shall contain a status of the observations made on the accounting year in question, and a status of the observations appearing as pending in the audit book comments relating to the annual report for the previous year.

1.2 The requirement for a separate section

The requirement for a separate section is compulsory. That is, the separate section on observations must always be included, irrespective of whether or not there actually are any observations. This applies for the audit book comments by both the internal auditors and the external auditors.

If the external auditors agree with the contents of the audit book comments¹²⁾ by the internal auditors, it is adequate that any observations only appear in the internal auditors' audit book comments. In this case, the separate section of the external auditors' audit book comments should state that the observations appear in the internal auditors' audit book comments. However, certain conditions are of such a nature that they must be mentioned in the audit book comments of both the external auditors and the internal auditors, e.g. conditions involving qualifications and/or supplementary information in the audit report.

The separate section must be located in a place where it is easy to find and it must have a heading which makes it clear where the observations are summarised. If a contents page has been prepared for the audit book comments relating to the annual report, the location of the section should appear here.

1.3 Requirement for a summary

The philosophy behind the provision is to give an overview. A summary (in a couple of lines) of each of the observations is therefore better than a repetition of the entire description. However, the problem itself must be clear from the summary. Several observations regarding the same matter should be combined where this is appropriate. For example it may be relevant to combine several observations on the procedures for extending loans under a single heading.

The summary of observations should be at company level. For groups, observations from subsidiary undertakings which are relevant at group level must be also included, cf. section 5(3) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups.

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

1.4 Requirement for all observations

All – without exception – of the observations appearing in the audit book must be summarised in the separate section of the audit book comments relating to the annual report.

Therefore, it is not possible to decide whether an observation is to be summarised on the basis of an assessment of its importance.

A matter which appears in the audit book as an observation once must from then on be included in the annual summary of observations in the audit book comments relating to the annual report. Therefore, an observation cannot be excluded if the audit book comments state that an observation has been resolved during the year. It must also be included in the very next annual summary. Only after the observation has appeared can it be excluded from future annual summaries.

1.5 Observations compared to comments

An observation is an indication from the auditor of a matter which is not in accordance with relevant regulations, orders, agreements ¹³⁾ or standards (including "good practice"), which apply for the relevant area. An observation could also cover a matter which the auditor, because of his professional experience, does not consider appropriate, even though the matter is not contrary to specific regulations, orders, agreements or standards.

A comment is supplementary information from an auditor regarding a given matter.

So, observations are not the same as comments. The function of an observation is to make the board of directors aware of matters which are not in accordance with regulations etc., or which are not appropriate. The function of a comment on the other hand is only to highlight a matter which has not given rise to observations.

Another difference between an observation and a comment is that an observation relates to a matter that is resolvable.

The following matters will typically give rise to observations relevant for the board of directors:

- non-compliance with solvency limits, exposure limits, credit limits, speculation provisions, placement limits, statutory minimum requirements for net assets /the capital requirement, etc.,
- non-compliance with the duties of the board of directors regarding the Public Companies Act, the Financial Business Act and the specific sector legislation, bookkeeping legislation, or the Financial Statements Act,
- non-compliance with requirements regarding notification to the Danish FSA,
- other violations of the law¹⁴⁾,
- orders from the Danish FSA, which have not yet been complied with,
- the assurance reports in the audit book comments required by the Danish FSA, on which the auditor has observations,
- matters which give rise to qualifications and/or supplementary information in the audit report,
- procedures where there is a need for improvements in internal controls (without this affecting information on whether the procedures are adequate), and
- non-compliance with the lines/guidelines set by the board of directors, and
- systems, internal control procedures or schemes which are not appropriate and/or effective, cf. section 35(1) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups.

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

It should be stressed that the above list is not exhaustive, but merely a number of examples of relevant types of observation.

1.6 The requirement for a status report

The legislation requires completion of a status report on

- the observations made for the accounting year in question, and
- the observations appearing as pending in the audit book comments relating to the annual report for the previous year.

Observations appearing in the current accounting year include observations in the audit book comments during the course of the year as well as the audit book comments for the year. The important point is the extent to which the observation has appeared as part of the audit for the relevant accounting year.

The status report must contain a reference to the pages on which the observations have been mentioned in the relevant audit book comments for the year, as well as references to the audit book comments relating to the previous annual reports, if this is not the first time the observation is mentioned.

Observations can have two types of status - either resolved or pending.

Resolved observations

Observations can be resolved in one of two ways:

- the matter is no longer relevant, or
- the matter has been remedied.

Observations that lose their relevance may be, for example, observations regarding problems with calculations of value adjustments for securities in a securities system where the system is subsequently changed to a new system which can calculate value adjustments correctly. Another example is an observation regarding a specific violation of the anti-speculation regulations, which does not imply poor internal controls. Cases of fraud are also examples of observations to be mentioned once, after which they lose their relevance.

Examples of observations which have been remedied may be observations regarding lack of descriptions of business procedures, and these procedures are later prepared.

For each observation resolved, there must be a statement of how the matter was resolved.

Pending observations

Observations, which are not remedied, are by their nature pending. There should be a statement for each pending observation of when the management expects the matter to be remedied. If the matter is partly remedied, this should also be stated. The status should also state any changes in the expected date of remedy.

As the audit is carried out taking into consideration the internal control environment at the undertaking, it is relevant that the auditor tests the extent to which previous observations have been remedied. The audit should be carried out on the basis of an assessment of materiality and risk, and therefore it should include application of a rotation principle, so that there is a longer period between audit of areas of less materiality and risk than areas of greater materiality or risk. However, the auditor will consider the previous observations no later than when the audit next includes the areas covered by the observation.

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

Information on how the individual observations have been remedied or are expected to be remedied is thus not part of the audit, and such information can therefore be based on information received from the management (the organisation).

If the auditors' professional doubts mean that the auditor is uncertain regarding the information, the auditor should then test the validity of the information.

If, during the audit, the auditor becomes aware that the information provided by the management (the organisation) regarding remedying observations is misleading or incorrect, the auditor must bring this to the attention of the board of directors in the audit book.

If the auditor otherwise becomes aware of matters which should be remedied, but have yet to be so, the auditor should examine the relevant area in the following year. If the observations relate to material matters for the presentation of the accounts, the auditor should reassess the audit plan and if necessary carry out additional audit work in the current year.

2. Examples

The following describes two examples which illustrate how the auditor can summarise observations so that they meet the requirements in the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups. The first model can be used in cases where the external auditors refer to observations by the internal auditors. The second model shows how the separate section on observations can be set up.

Example 1

X. Summary of observations

»In accordance with the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups, in a separate section of the audit book comments relating to the annual report and the consolidated financial statements, the auditor must summarise all observations which the audit has given cause to present to the board of directors. The summary must contain a status of the observations made on the accounting year in question, and a status of the observations appearing as pending in the audit book comments relating to the annual financial statements for the previous accounting year.

It has been agreed with the internal auditor that the summary in accordance with the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups is only to appear in the audit book comments by the internal auditors, and we refer the reader to these.

We have no further comments on this matter.«

ANNEX 3

The tasks and behaviour of the internal audit function

The Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups stipulates a framework within which the internal audit function must carry out its tasks. The purpose of this is to ensure the independence of the internal audit function from the activities being audited.

Section 1 below summarises the matters which the internal audit function should be aware of before accepting a task. After this, section 2 provides a number of examples of tasks which the internal audit function may or may not carry out.

1. Provisions of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups

1.1 Only audit

According to section 12(2) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups,

- the chief internal auditor and the staff within the internal audit function shall not take part in any other work within the undertaking or group than audit work.

1.2 Independence

According to section 12(3) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups

- the internal audit function may not accept duties when circumstances exist which may raise doubts in a well informed third party about the independence of the internal audit function.

Section 14(3) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups states that

- the audit tasks may not bring the chief internal auditor into a situation where he issues an assurance report or provides information or evidence on conditions or documents for which the chief internal auditor or employees in the internal audit function have prepared the basis.

The provisions are to ensure the independence of the internal audit function. The chief internal auditor carries out reporting tasks pursuant to the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups and reports on the annual report, if this is resolved by the board of directors. Therefore the internal audit function must always safeguard its independence, just as the external auditor must safeguard his independence. However, the internal audit function has a slightly different basis for its independence because of its special role in the financial undertaking.

In order to safeguard its independence, the internal audit function should always be aware that the chief internal auditor and the employees of the internal audit function:

- have a duty to identify and assess circumstances and relations which create a threat to independence and document that this has been done,
- take the steps necessary to eliminate these threats or reduce them to an acceptable level by applying security measures to the extent possible, given that the basis is that they are employed by the undertaking, and
- may not carry out audit tasks when circumstances exist which may raise doubts in a well informed third party about the independence of the internal audit function.

1.3 Adequate qualifications

Furthermore, the internal audit function, cf. section 14(2)

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

- may only accept tasks which they are adequately qualified to carry out.

The list below details which tasks may be carried out by the chief internal auditor and employees of the internal audit function pursuant to the provisions.

2. Examples of tasks for the internal audit function

2.1 Financial audit and review

Financial audit and review covers audit of historical financial information, including annual reports, interim reports etc. The work covers a review and assessment of the procedures as well as the manual and system-based controls linked to production of the historical financial information.

The tasks of the internal audit function include, depending on the level of qualifications and whether or not it has been resolved that the internal audit function is to report on the annual report, for example

- audit and issue of an auditors' report on annual reports,
- review of interim reports,
- issue of assurance reports, information and explanations pursuant to the Financial Business Act and the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups,
- issue of assurances to public authorities,
- assistance to the external auditor in connection with issues of subordinated debt and offerings of shares,
- assessment of whether procedures and internal controls comply with section 71 of the Financial Business Act and the associated guidelines and internal guidelines, and
- assistance with due-diligence for sales and purchases of undertakings.

In most cases the primary task of the internal audit function will be to take part in the financial audit. However, it is becoming increasingly common for the internal audit function to focus on operational audit, cf. the description below, i.e. that the involvement of the internal audit function in the financial audit of the annual report is being reduced or companies are opting out of this involvement.

If the chief internal auditor reports on the annual report, the chief internal auditor shall take part in the audit of the material and high-risk areas, cf. section 15(2) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups. Assessment of which areas are material and high-risk is according to the guidelines in the International Auditing Standard 315 and will depend on the type and complexity of the individual undertaking.

For credit institutions, for example, loans, charges, trading portfolio, property, unlisted shares and derivative financial instruments as well as liabilities such as pension obligations and guarantees will, as a point of departure, be material and high-risk, partly because of the complex regulations, use of models, compliance with placement regulations and solvency calculations.

For insurance companies, premium income, costs of claims/insurance services as well as investment returns are considered material and high-risk. The associated investment assets and provisions for insurance and investment contracts as well as reinsurance and derivative financial instruments are likely to be material and high-risk areas.

The contents of the annual report, including the management's review, financial statements, consolidated financial statements, 5-year summary and notes as well as accounting policies are always considered material and high-risk areas.

The above examples for the individual types of undertaking are only intended as inspiration, as in all cases a specific and documented individual assessment shall be taken of the material and high-risk areas associated with the activities of the individual undertaking.

As part of the audit, the internal audit function may not accept duties when circumstances exist which may raise doubts in a well informed third party about the independence of the internal audit function. When carrying out the financial audit, the internal audit may not, for example:

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

- take part in decision making or take responsibility for this,
- carry out control tasks, be part of the internal control,
- prepare the annual report or other statements of historical financial information
- perform bookkeeping or other registrations
- take part in recruitment of employees for the undertaking, except employees for the internal audit function,
- administer salaries, property, building extensions or similar, or
- order payments or have powers of procuration for the financial undertaking in other areas than those regarding costs relating to the internal audit function.

This shall apply notwithstanding whether the chief internal auditor reports on the annual report.

The tasks mentioned are not audit, cf. section 12(2) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups, just as the internal audit function will be in conflict with the ban on self-review by carrying out the tasks mentioned, cf. section 14(3) of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups. Before the internal audit function accepts duties which are not mentioned in the audit charter, or on which a large number of hours must be spent, the internal audit function shall obtain authorisation from the board of directors or an audit committee.

2.2 Operational audit

Operational audit involves assessment of the undertaking's processes with a view to testing and reporting on whether they are in accordance with the goals set by the management. Depending on the activity and size of the undertaking, an operational audit includes a process review focussing on efficiency, an appraisal of the reliability of the financial and operating reporting, compliance with legislation and regulations as well as security of the assets of the undertaking. Investigations of fraud may be included.

For example, the internal audit may not

- take part in decision making or take responsibility for this,
- carry out control tasks, be part of the internal control,
- be responsible for implementation of changed operating routines, including efficiency measures and rationalisation,
- be responsible for preparation of day-to-day monitoring and reporting of performance,
- take part in setting operational targets,
- determine or be responsible for implementing sanctions in the event of discoveries of fraud, or
- set or be responsible for preparation of operating strategies and processes.

The scope of the operational audit shall be agreed with the board of directors in the audit charter, although such that the agreed duties are kept within the framework of the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups.

2.3 Audit of risk management

Financial undertakings are exposed to various types of risk. The most important types of risk are credit risk, market risk, liquidity risk, operational risk and business risk. The audit includes the established risk management within the individual types of risk, including the limits set and the reporting structure established.

The internal audit function shall assess whether the policies established are within the framework of the Financial Business Act with the associated executive orders and guidelines. The internal audit function may not accept monitoring duties such that the internal audit function becomes part of the internal control.

For example, development of risk-management strategies for approval by the board of directors as well as setting the risk level are typical management tasks which therefore cannot be carried out by the internal audit function.

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

The internal audit function cannot accept development and control duties in relation to the individual types of risk, as the internal audit function could find itself in a situation where it is to give an assurance on tasks in which it has participated itself.

As a point of departure, there is nothing to prevent the internal audit function from acting as the independent unit in relation to point 75 in the guidelines on adequate base capital and individual solvency requirements, if the internal audit function is independent and it is not in conflict with other legislation and regulations.

2.4 Audit of the compliance function

The compliance function is responsible for assisting management in efficiently managing the compliance risks of the undertaking. If an independent compliance function has not been established, the day-to-day management is responsible for managing any compliance risks and appointing another unit to be responsible for carrying out the necessary control.

On the basis of materiality and risk, the internal audit function shall review and assess whether the processes established in the undertaking for managing the activities of the compliance function are adequate. The internal audit function may not manage the compliance function, or parts of this, as this is not compatible with the audit task (self-review).

2.5 Audit tasks which are not directly related to the annual report

Tasks which are not part of the audit work leading up to a report on the annual report, but which are considered as an audit task shall appear explicitly in the function description.

This does not apply, however, for audit work regarding issuance of assurances and information pursuant to the Executive Order on Auditing Financial Undertakings etc. as well as Financial Groups which do not relate to the report on the annual report.

3. Behaviour

Chief internal auditors, deputy chief internal auditors and employees of the internal audit function shall observe the ethical principles below in such a way that neither the individual auditor nor the department is affected detrimentally.

Integrity

The auditor shall be fair and honest in all professional and business contexts.

Objectivity

The auditor may not be prejudiced, have conflicts of interest, or be under improper influence of others that oppresses his professional and business judgement.

Professional competence and due care

The auditor shall regularly maintain his technical knowledge and skills at a level which is necessary to ensure that qualified, professional services are provided based on updated knowledge of the latest developments within good practice, legislation and methods. When supplying professional services, the auditor shall act diligently and in accordance with relevant technical and professional standards.

Confidentiality

The auditor shall respect the confidentiality of the information obtained in the course of the employment and may not divulge such information to third parties without adequate and specific authorisation unless there is a legal or professional right or duty to do so. Confidential information obtained as part of the employment may not be used for the personal benefit of the auditor or third parties.

Professional behaviour

While this translation was carried out by a professional translation agency, the text is to be regarded as an unofficial translation based on the latest official Executive Order no. 1224 of 22 October 2007. Only the Danish document has legal validity.

January 2008, GlobalDenmark Translations

The auditor shall comply with the relevant legislation and other regulations and avoid any form of behaviour which may discredit the internal audit function or the external auditor.
